Luke Wins Again

Marsh Must Pay Commission.

HE SUED AND WAS SUED.

The Merchants' Protective association won its second suit against W. H. Marsh in Judge Armstrong's court yesterday afternoon. The allegation of the company was that Marsh gave it a bill of $261 to collect; that later the man who owed the account paid Marsh $100, and, still later, the balance. The company sued to recover 50 per cent of the first amount and was awarded it. The suit decided yesterday was for the recovery of one-half of the $191 as collection fees.—Salt Lake Telegram, February 10, 1909.

Dissolution Sale

Davis Shoe Co., as a corporation, will be no more

The most important business announcement ever given to the public—a sale effecting the entire stock of the greatest shoe store in Utah. Here's the reason—

In 1893 Ben Davis embarked in the shoe business in Salt Lake City. Success followed his efforts and so rapidly did his business grow that it was decided that to handle the volume of business a corporation should be and was formed. Mr. Davis, who has always been active in the conducting of this business, has secured options on the controlling stock and after this great dissolution sale will conduct the business as a private enterprise.

Corporation laws must be complied with—money must be raised to pay all obligations and stockholders before the dissolution can be effected—hence this sensational selling.

Stock is in elegant condition. The January sale cleared out all broken lines and old stock. Every shoe is strictly new and up to the minute. Reductions we are making will create a furore in shoe selling.

SALE NOW ON—don't delay—you'll be here—the offers are simply compelling

Daily arrivals of spring goods will enhance the interest in the sale—all will be included at unprecedented reductions. No reserve. Everything must go.

Men's, women's, boys', girls' and infants' footwear of every description in all the newest lasts will be sacrificed regardless of value. Entire amount of money necessary must be raised by March 27th.
